Book Trust's mission is to help elementary school children with little/no access to books fall in love with reading and become lifelong learners. With Book Trust, students learn the power of choice and the pride of ownership, and students' reading levels and academic performance improve, motivating them to succeed.

Book Trust believes that Choice, Consistency and Celebration, along with access to books and independent reading time, create a world in which literacy removes barriers and provides all children with tools to navigate life successfully.

"MY KIDS TAKE MORE CARE OF THEIR BOOKS FROM BOOK TRUST THAN THEIR TOYS – THEY JUST LOVE READING."

SILVIA | Parent
Together, we did it!

This year, we reached the first milestone set forth in our strategic plan—50,000 students. In fact, we surpassed this goal and served 51,000 children during the 2016-2017 school year. A 40% increase in the number of students served was accompanied by a 35% increase in revenue, catapulting Book Trust across the $5M revenue threshold—an accomplishment that fewer than 5% of US nonprofits ever achieve. Our impact now spans from New York City, the largest city in America, to Molokai, the most rural island in Hawaii.

How did we accomplish this? With your support! Whether you are a teacher who taught students how to choose books they are interested in reading, a volunteer who read with students at a book celebration, or a donor who sponsored a student, a classroom, or a school, it is each person’s individual contribution that led to our collective accomplishments. Thank you for being part of this journey to inspire a passion for reading among kids in need across America.

Our recent growth has been accelerated by the powerful combination of a successful program and leveraging strong, existing relationships in new markets. Moving forward, Book Trust is taking time to ensure that we are not only focused on offering an effective, evidence-based program that delivers measurable improvements in reading motivation and achievement, but also on expanding our reach with a strategic, intentional approach that will ensure sustainable growth.

Book Trust’s current roadmap gets us to scale at 100,000 students, and longer-term, we aim to reach at least one million of the 16 million kids living in poverty who need our help. We dream of a day when Book Trust no longer needs to exist, because every child has the tools and skills they need to be successful lifelong readers and learners. Thank you for dreaming with us! Together we are changing the trajectory of the lives of the children who need us most.

With gratitude,

Amy Friedman | President & CEO
Building a Sustainable Future

As we go forward, we continue to refine our program, evaluation process, and business model to ensure that Book Trust can both achieve and successfully weather significant growth. We've effectively piloted a program fee model that we'll expand to help strengthen our district and school partnerships and diversify revenue streams. We've made investments in our infrastructure in terms of board, staff, and technology. We're also building awareness of Book Trust at a national level, and together, these initiatives, aligned with our strategic goals, will sustain us through the growth we've already experienced and beyond.

How We’re Helping

Choice, Celebration, and Consistency Make the Difference

Each month of the school year, Book Trust teachers engage their students in choosing books that connect to their interests. Anticipation builds as teachers place their students' orders on Scholastic's website and kids start asking, “Are the books here yet?” and “How many more days?”

When they arrive, students hug their books, and sometimes even smell them, before sharing their new prized possession with their peers. Reading, or at least 48%, by the end of the year, Book Trust students made more progress. The percentage of Book Trust students reading on grade level jumped 19%, compared to a 4% increase by non-Book Trust students.

Choice, Celebration, and Consistency Make the Difference

Each month of the school year, Book Trust teachers engage their students in choosing books that connect to their interests. Anticipation builds as teachers place their students’ orders on Scholastic’s website and kids start asking, “Are the books here yet?” and “How many more days?”

When they arrive, students hug their books, and sometimes even smell them, before sharing their new prized possession with their peers. Reading, or at least beginning their books in the classroom before they go home allows students to lean on their teachers for support and gain confidence in the new worlds they’re discovering between the pages.

And Book Trust does make a measurable difference. In the 2016-2017 school year, Book Trust students made significantly higher gains in reading achievement. Although fewer Book Trust students were reading on grade level at the beginning of the year compared to our control group (35% vs. 48%), by the end of the year, Book Trust students had made more progress. The percentage of Book Trust students reading on grade level jumped 19%, compared to a 4% increase by non-Book Trust students.

“Here’s what I see – I see the excitement in the kids when their books arrive – the same kids who are told constantly that they don’t like to read, that they have poor reading stamina, or don’t enjoy reading the way they should – these kids get books, and class has to shut down. Not just for the celebration that we do for Book Trust, but beyond. They will put away their Pokemon cards, their little comics and things, and they take out their Book Trust books, running from friend to friend, sharing what they got this month. These kids, from communities where people believe they are so impoverished, so unmotivated, so under-achieving – THESE KIDS FLIP THAT SCRIPT.

They read, they love to read, they take the books home and read with their little brother or mommy or daddy – and they can’t wait to order their next books and do it again. They show us who they are, telling us, ‘I’m not who you think I am – I am a Reader.’ That’s what Book Trust is doing for these kids. It was a profound honor and privilege working with your amazing organization. It will be a cherished memory, long after I retire, of the joy you brought hundreds of children at 112. Thank you from the bottom of my heart. I will miss you all very much.”

59% of Book Trust students were reading on grade level after a year of choosing, owning, and loving their books (up from 31% at the beginning of the year).

89% of Book Trust students believe that becoming a good reader is “important” or “very important.”

82% of Book Trust teachers report that their students read books they choose every day.

Meet Moe Cantrell.

Moe remembers the Scholastic Book Clubs flyers with both longing and embarrassment – in his family, there was no extra money for books. But Moe was a voracious reader, who instinctively knew the power of reading and learning, and through hard work, a football scholarship and an MBA, grew up to be a successful HR professional and entrepreneur in Denver. Today Moe has many, many books – on a wide variety of subjects – and with reading a part of his everyday life for many years now, has been able to set the stage for a very different experience for his two-year-old son.

Moe volunteered at a Book Trust celebration this year, and immediately connected with the young boy he was paired to read with. It seems Jesus came from a family like Moe’s – but Jesus has Book Trust, helping him learn to read. Moe is grateful.

As a child, I wasn’t much of a reader. I risked falling behind my peers; however, I have a clear memory of discovering I could read about sports. I could read about football, my sports heroes, etc. Suddenly a spark was ignited and I realized how interesting and fun reading every day.”
